

2 Hours • 873 boxes • 17,460 meals

With more than 40 days of triple-digit heat in Oklahoma, it takes a special event to get pork producers off their farms. On August 4, more than 20 Oklahoma pork producers supported the Regional Food Bank of Oklahoma by volunteering at Rock 'n Box.

“Volunteers are the lifeblood of this organization. Without them, we can’t get food to those who need it. We want to thank the pork producers for their continued support in the fight against hunger.”

Rodney Bivens,
executive director, Regional Food Bank

(Clockwise from top left) Dottie King, David and Catreana McMullen, Basil Werner, Jeff Mencke

“As pork producers, our job is to feed the world and it is sad to think of how many people go hungry right here in Oklahoma,”

Bill Barnes
OPC president